Hi folks,

Here's the latest update to my proposal. See attached PDF.

To answer Jen's previous questions:

1. I've moved the screen placement to the south wall. See mock up image in proposal.
2. With a single long HDMI cable, we should be able to accommodate a computer connection at any location at the conference table.

Looking forward to your feedback.

Ian,

A couple of thoughts I have are as follows:

-I don't think under the heating/cooling element is good placement for the screen. With high usage in the summer months they do tend to leak. We also have them serviced once per year and having a nice device like that under the unit is begging for something to happen. I am unsure in this new setup where NEAT TV will film from. If it is the same location, they will be unable to see the display from that position.

-While it is probably a 50/50 split about how many people have Macs versus a different laptop, the cord needed for the other laptop connection, will that solve the problem of people having to set their device up and put it in a chair or what not? Will they still be able to sit at the table with the board and still present?

-How are we funding this project?

Thank You,
