

Passport to winter fun

LAST MONTH KIDS in ACSD schools brought home a special assignment: The Winter Passport. Their mission was to check off as many of the activities — create a snow sculpture, find animal tracks, go skating or skiing or sledding, etc. — as they could. Families shared photos of the adventures they had. Clockwise from above are Bridport Central School students Kayden Castle and Eliza Myrick having fun in the snow; Frankie Houghton, 3, using colorful water to decorate a snow sculpture in Weybridge; wintery artwork by Alden Sherry; and Kayden Castle sliding out of a tube.

LaRose named Fire Chief of the Year

BRISTOL. — The Bristol Fire Department Assistant Chief LaRose recently was honored with the 2020 Vermont State Firefighters' Association Robert King Fire Chief of the Year Award. LaRose is a 26-year veteran of the fire service, joining the Bristol Fire Department (BFD) April 6, 1994.

LaRose's work ethic, knowledge, and natural leadership abilities were evident early on in his fire service career and in only a few short years, was appointed to the rank of lieutenant. After serving seven years with the BFD, LaRose and his family had the opportunity to build a home in the neighboring town of Lincoln, where he was immediately recruited by the Lincoln Volunteer Fire Company (LVFC). Within a year the LVFC appointed LaRose to captain. In only two years LaRose took on even more responsibility running the day-to-day operations of the LVFC as their business manager. For the next seven years he was instrumental in the LVFC's transition to a modern fire service organization.

With the development of a Mission Statement and a Vision for the LVFC, LaRose established an Emergency Medical First Response organization within the LVFC to address a critical need in the community. During this same time, LaRose organized several very successful recruitment drives and as a result, recruited 12 new firefighters in three years.

In 2011 LaRose and his family returned to his hometown of Bristol, where he joined the BFD again after a nine-year hiatus. Within his first year back, the department appointed LaRose to the rank of lieutenant.

Over the past 26 years, LaRose has held many leadership positions in the fire service, advancing through the ranks of firefighter, lieutenant, captain, business manager, and assistant chief, a position that he has held for nine years.

In addition to LaRose's fireground duties he, like all Bristol fire officers, has regularly assigned duties and responsibilities delegated to him by the chief.

One of those duties is serving as a program coordinator for one of the department's many programs.

In LaRose's case, he is responsible for two programs, the Dry-Hydrant and Smoke Detector programs.

As Dry-Hydrant program coordinator, LaRose is responsible for securing five grants from the Vermont Rural Fire Protection Program for the installation of new dry-hydrants and replacement of existing hydrants. The planning and logistical support needed for these projects is great and time consuming. Project management is a necessary skill set required to see these projects through from start to finish. Phone calls, emails, site visits with engineers and contractors, ensuring compliance with environmental rules and regulations, the list goes on. But at the end of the day after all the work is complete, the residents of Bristol are safer for it.

Chief LaRose organized several very successful recruitment drives and as a result, recruited 12 new firefighters in three years.

Speaking of keeping Bristol residents safe, the second program that LaRose is responsible for is the BFD Smoke Detector program. LaRose is the BFD liaison with both the American Red Cross and the Vermont Division of Fire Safety, which funds this program by providing the detectors through a federal grant program. LaRose and his team work with Bristol residents on installing these lifesaving devices in the homes of eligible residents.

STUDENTS OF THE WEEK FROM AREA HIGH SCHOOLS

Mount Abraham Union High School

Ava Young

Ava Young of Starksboro is Mount Abraham Union High School's Student of the Week. She is the daughter of Janet Fuller and Andrew Young, and has two sisters: Harper is in 7th grade at Mt. Abe, and Olivia is a junior at Penn State.

Ava started her high school experience with highest honors in 9th grade. She has continued to appear on Mt. Abe's honor roll throughout her time there. She has done so while taking a challenging course load, which has included AP Calculus, AP Literature and AP Biology. Her teachers find her to be truly genuine and kind, and exhibiting great grit and determination.

Ava has played sports her whole life, but had to take a break at the beginning of her junior year. For Mt. Abe she has played softball, lacrosse, basketball and soccer.

Ava works as a pet-sitter in her area, and has done so since 8th grade. She is usually hired by local people to watch their animals or their house while they are on vacation or away.

Outside of school she likes to travel, exercise and spend time with her dogs. Right now she has two dogs that she loves to walk when the weather is warm. Ava has gone to Brown Ledge Camp in Colchester for five summers. It has become one of her favorite places to be.

When asked about what high school has taught her, Ava says, "From high school I have learned that anything can change in an instant, but change is not always a bad thing."

Next year Ava will be taking a gap year for health reasons, but after that she plans on attending a four-year college.

Ava is going places, and can accomplish anything she sets out to. Everyone at Mt. Abe wishes her all the best.

Rune Speyers

Rune Speyers is Otter Valley Union High School's Student of the Week. Rune and his parents, Sue and Scott Speyers, live in Leicester.

Rune says that while he hasn't always excelled academically, he has managed to find what he enjoys doing. He is a great example of what can come from being involved in a high school technical program. He was accepted to the Power Mechanics and Welding program at Stafford Technical Center in his junior year. Rune says it is refreshing to work in a space oriented toward the type of work he likes and is proficient in. "I quickly learned that while I am no mechanic, I am most certainly a welder," he says. All forms of metal work interest him, and he tends to be better at that than anything else. He says he enjoys being able to use his skills to make things for others. His Welding teacher at Stafford says, "Rune is one of my top performing students ... and has been a pleasure to work with. Rune recently completed designing and fabricating a propane blacksmith forge, which will allow him to continue practicing his skills outside of school. Rune has also applied for post-secondary welding training at Advanced Welding Institute in Burlington, which I am sure he will excel at."

Rune has been involved in Walking Stick Theatre since 7th grade and was appointed president for his junior and senior years. The group was lucky enough to participate in competitions a couple times, both times making it through the regional and state competitions and on to the New England Festival.

Rune believes in keeping the environment healthy. Every summer he works removing milfoil from Lake Dunmore as a contracted free diver for removing the invasive plant. He also likes weight lifting and playing his banjo. On top of that, he is a hobbyist blacksmith (unsurprisingly) so he also likes to make things.

Rune's advice to his peers is to make friends and hold on to them — "Find the few knuckleheads who will be there for you when you need it," he says. "You'll be alright regardless of what happens."

After high school Rune plans to attend a technical school for welding and enter the trade so he can get out there and start making things. Otter Valley wishes him a fulfilling future of makerhood.

LaRose

 assumes the role of facilities manager for the Town's 79 West St. fire station and is responsible for ensuring that the facility is fully operational and maintained in accordance with federal and state facility rules and regulations. This is a part-time job itself and just one example of what has become "expected" of a volunteer firefighter when they're not answering the 2 a.m. alarm or training every other week.

The list of responsibilities is long for any volunteer fire officer. LaRose, like other volunteer officers, just does the work with no expectation of being recognized for going above and beyond.

The world of firefighting is ever changing and evolving. As a leader LaRose embraces this change and evolution as he understands his role and responsibility as a leader and doing what is necessary to protect the health and safety of Bristol's firefighter's and ultimately, the town.

LaRose has strong values and believes in the many great traditions of the fire service but equally as important recognizes that many of practices once used in the fire service may not be as effective and as safe as they once were. As a progressive, modern-day chief officer, LaRose has been instrumental in developing and implementing new standard operating procedures and guidelines that reflect today's national fire service standards and federally mandated regulations for the modern fire service.

Throughout this pandemic LaRose was delegated the responsibility of ensuring the BFD has on hand the necessary equipment and supplies to continue operating safely in the COVID-19 environment. Using the guidance provided by the Vermont Department of Health and the Vermont Division of Fire Safety, LaRose has kept the BFD well informed and ensures all are doing their part to keep each other and their families safe.

Some of LaRose's efforts include securing two-cloth face coverings for each firefighter, which early on in the pandemic was no small feat. LaRose continues to ensure the availability of the necessary cleaning supplies to keep the apparatus and equipment disinfected and safe and securing full-face N95 respirators to use with each firefighter issued a S.C.B.A. face piece. LaRose has been an absolute rock for the department helping it navigate through this new and challenging COVID world.

LaRose's attention to detail is evident on the emergency scene as the well. He has the education, training, knowledge and experience, and is well-versed in the strategies and tactics needed to effectively mitigate modern-day emergencies. As important, he realizes firefighters respond to countless types of emergencies, and no one person has the knowledge or resources to effectively mitigate all aspects of the situation. LaRose is not afraid to delegate or reach out to a more qualified individual when encountering a situation beyond his level of expertise; this is a rare characteristic and one that is to be commended and another example of excellent leadership qualities LaRose has developed over the years.

Kevin LaRose's leadership also radiates beyond the scope of the fire service. He has many years of leadership with the Boy Scouts and is the Scoutmaster of the local troop. He is frequently at a meeting, preparing a fundraiser, or hiking and camping in a remote area with the youth of Bristol, passing down life skills to the next generation who might not otherwise have a chance to learn such important lessons. His efforts with the organizations he's involved in are tireless, and these efforts have benefited many.

With all LaRose's achievements as a Bristol Fire Department chief officer, he still finds the time for many other activities he holds dear. Kevin is a husband to Megan, and a father to Emma and Koby. He is always on the move to a sporting event to show his support, or at other various school activities. His commitment to family is second to none, and this commitment carries throughout all things important to him. The Bristol Fire Department is lucky to be on Kevin LaRose's list of things he holds near and dear to his heart.

Kevin LaRose has been a key person within the BFD's leadership team holding a solid vision for the department, as well as employed remarkable leadership skills, to help build the admirable community-based organization the BFD is today.
